REMARKS (Use same A-5 for Reply when space permits) - REMARQUES (SI l'espace le permet, répondre sur cette formule)

DDA's reply is an accurate reflection of the way our policy is currently expressed, in view that we probably cannot defend under CHRA denying security clearance on firing someone on homosexual grounds.

I believe the reply should go further, explaining that we would treat blackmailable conduct such as extra marital, deviant or other sexual misconduct as we would other security problems. If an employee could be open to coercion or is dishonest we should release / not hire.

Employees who "confess" to have it a record with a view to avoiding coercion may still be vulnerable, if they are afraid of spouse or public knowing their secret.

"Any features of an employee or applicant character or his/her behavior that could lead to coercion is of concern. Each case is treated on its own merits, with the final decision based on whether it would be an acceptable risk to entrust the
